Sept. 20. DAILY.

Night On Bald Mountain.

On a lonely night Alex Benton, of Fort Edward, N. Y., climbed Bald Mountain to the home of a neighbor, tortured by asthma, bent on curing him with Dr. King's New Discovery, that had cured himself of asthma. This wonderful medicine soon relieved and quickly cured his neighbor. Later it cured his son's wife of a severe lung trouble. Millions believe it's the greatest throat and lung cure on earth. Coughs, colds, croup, hemorrhages and sore lungs are surely by it. Best for hay fever, grip and whooping cough. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all dealers.

Sept. 20. BERTIE.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh

That Contain Mercury
as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by druggists. Price, 75c a bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

SOME gentlemen of this place were a few days ago talking of the benefit Hazel Green Academy had been to our town and this section of country and the want of appreciation shown by our people, when it was suggested that the citizens living within a radius of two and a half miles should donate $1,000 or $1,500 towards buying a farm for the C. W. B. M. It was said at the time that possibly forty to sixty additional pupils could thus be added to the enrollment every year. Taking up the idea the editor of this paper in turn suggested the matter to Prof. Carter, connected with the school, and he said nothing would be more appropriate or more appreciated by the ladies of the C. W. B. M. He further stated that employment could be given to a large number of the young farmer boys, enabling them to secure an education at small cost. In some instances half the cost might be exacted from the pupil, in other cases maybe not more than a fourth would be required, that that was a matter largely dependent upon the individual student. There is no question but it would enable many poor boys to get an education and on the other hand all citizens who contributed to the enterprise would feel that they were doing good in helping these young men to a better life. The few with whom we have talked admit the fact that the people here have demonstrated no appreciation of the importance of having the school here, and signified a willingness to help along the cause. A tract of land could be purchased not far from the campus and thus all young men not able to pay full tuition and board could be given employment to help them out. Some people within the territory mentioned could not give much toward the purchase of such a property, but if all will enter into the matter heartily such a sum as mentioned may soon be raised. Let our citizens discuss it among themselves and at an early date solicitors should go into the field named, and see what can be done. It is a debt we owe the C. W. B. M., and would be but a mite in return for what they have done for our people. Talk it up on all occasions.

MANY times have we noted the fact in the columns of THE HERALD that obituaries, cards of thanks, tributes of respect and like articles are classed as advertisements and must be paid for, else our columns would be filled to overflowing with such notices and we would have no room for news and no space to sell for business men to advertise their goods, and thus be deprived of our only means of income with which to pay the running expenses of the paper and feed and clothe ourselves and better seven-eighths. Yet despite all these notices we are once in a while confronted by some one who brings or sends in a long obituary of some deceased member of his family and wants the same published free just because he has been a subscriber for a number of years, and during this same time we have paid them more cash for provisions and other commodities than their subscription amounted to. It would be just as proper for him to go to a merchant from whom he had been buying goods for years and say to him, "My son (or daughter) has just died, and since I have been patronizing you for a long time you ought to give me a suit of burying clothes, or a casket, so I can bury him." Do you think you would get it? Of course not, and you would keep on trading with the merchant and think no more of it. Now this is just our case. The space in the columns of THE HERALD is for sale at so much per line for advertising the wares of a merchant or the virtues and good qualities of a deceased relative or friend.

THE Democrats of the 92nd legislative district, composed of the counties of Breathitt, Lee and Magoffin, met in convention at Jackson last week and nominated R. C. Hill, of Beattyville, as candidate for representative. Mr. Hill has heretofore been a staunch Republican, but dissatisfaction in the ranks of that party caused him to desert and take up the banner of Democracy.

Promote Good Road Making.

Good roads are simply a result of thorough drainage, and keeping the surface of the roadbed smooth and well packed. So keep all drain ditches open, and the road drag moving. Nothing comes so nearly filling all the requirements for maintaining a perfect roadbed as the simple drag. Fill up all low places, and work the dirt toward the center of the road. Cut or trim all hedges bordering the highway, that the good effect of sun and wind may be applied. Do your full share of improving the road and try to persuade your neighbor that he should do the same, and the most gratifying results are certain. As in most everything, it's the little items that combine to promote good road making. If there are some short, deep ruts between your place and town how long would it take to throw a shovelful or two of dirt into these public nuisances? It would save you and your neighbor many a jerk and jolt, to say nothing of the wear and tear on horses, harness and vehicles.

Same way with the approaches to nine out of every ten bridges you bump over while driving to town. Patch those treacherous holes in the bridges, too. A horse's leg is easily broken in one of these wicked-looking holes.

Make it a rule to stop the team and throw at least a dozen rocks and pebbles out of the track into the ditch every time you drive to town. You get mighty tired of the jerking and jolting they give you. They also knock out your wagon and buggy tires more than most men think.

Nobody knows better than the farmer what a valuable asset to a community a good road is.

MOUNTAINEER NEEDS.

One or Two Questions Answered by Asking Several More and Still the Needs Remain.

Brother Cooper: Today, Sept. 9th, I picked up THE HERALD of Aug. 19th, overlooked in my rush for vacation about that date, and I find in it an article signed by Francis B. Livesay, Clarkson, Md., in which he comes to the defense of the people of the mountains of Kentucky against the efforts of certain well meaning people in the cities who want to educate them and uplift them. But Mr. Livesay overdoes his defense, I think, by putting the mountaineer on a plane considerably above the facts. For example, he says: "They see God in the clouds and have Him in their minds, which is more inspiring than any knowledge of Him through memorized book knowledge." Do they? If they do, it doesn't seem to prevent their killing each other in open fights and from ambush, not to mention innumerable drunken brawls in which men are cut and slashed and beaten. If they see God in the clouds above "Bloody Breathitt," for example, they've got to do it with one eye while the other is kept busy watching for a shot from the bush. And the attention of Mr. Livesay is called to the fact that, whereas in the cities, which he cites as quite as culpable as the mountains, murders and drunken brawls occur among the criminal classes, or near-criminal, it is the respectable, in many instances the representative, people of the mountains, who are guilty.

And I say this in all friendliness because as a friend of the mountaineers of Kentucky, I sincerely hope for their up-lifting, and have always done what I could to further it. And not as one who did not know them, but as one of them, for my early life was passed in the "red brush" of northeast Kentucky and I know what I am talking about.

Mr. Livesay goes on with a lot of questions about race suicide, tramps and other moral discrepancies practically unknown to the mountains, but when he mentions the unemployed, I want to call his attention again to the condition of numerous farmers in certain counties who are on the verge of starvation. If those farmers, no matter how poor their land, had been properly employed in tilling it, would they not have raised enough to feed them? That sort of unemployment is a disgrace, whereas the kind which results from lack of employment is only a misfortune. But when a farmer with the means at hand to maintain himself and his family gets into a condition of starvation, what can be said in his defense?

He asks again: "Have they (the mountaineers) a pure food problem?" If they have not they ought to have. Did Mr. Livesay ever sit down at the table of some of the mountaineers he is defending? Technically the food might be pure, but if he found it edible, it is more than others, unaccustomed to it, have found it. Yet the mountaineers eat it and manage to live on it. I do not say thrive on it, because they do not thrive, and any one who looks at the average mountaineer and his women and children know that none of them is properly nourished. And next Mr. Livesay asks, "Have they an indigestion problem?" If Mr. Livesay had known anything about these people he would know that indigestion is their curse and the cause of most of their trouble, mentally, morally and physically. I am in a position to know, and I do not hesitate to say, that more than seventy five per cent of the mountaineers are continuous sufferers with indigestion. They "doctor" for other ailments, but at the base of them all lies indigestion. The food they eat is not the proper kind and when it is the proper kind it is not properly prepared. Just now I am trying to organize a campaign of education along these lines. Kentucky has been having a "Whirlwind of Education," but the essential ignorance has been overlooked by the Whirlwinders. They are going after the brains of the people. I am after their stomachs. If we have good stomachs we may expect to do something with the brains, but the best brains on earth will prove useless with defective stomachs.

Much of the reformation I seek depends upon the women of the mountains—the Queens of the Kitchen, if they will be, but are not now. It is for them to get out of gardens, which do not now exist, from the cows and the chickens, healthful substitutes for hog and hominy, and having procured the raw material to learn how to put it on the table fit for a king. Everything is right at their hands, the ground will produce the goods if the hands will stir up the soil and plant the seed; the cows will give the milk and the chickens will lay the eggs. With this sort of food as the base of digestible operations of the stomach, the hog may be as useful as ever and hominy still flourish as a green bay tree. But there must be something to go with the hog and the hominy. Hog and hominy never yet spelled success for any people, and it never will. Get into your gardens, oh, ye women of the mountains, and become the handsome wives of manly mountaineers and the mothers of pink cheeked, healthy children. If you do not, the doom of the saffron and the slattern will be yours forever.

In the meantime, I hope Mr. Livesay will have to board with some mountaineer and his wife who think hog and hominy good enough for anybody.

In conclusion I might suggest a school of cooking for the mountaineer women with Aunt Lou Day in charge of it. She shore does know how to put up victuals that are powerful good eatin'.

Yours,
Sept. 9th. W. J. LAMPTON.

A communication from Belknap came in too late for publication this week.

Tuesday of this week Dr. Taylor Center moved to the property recently vacated by Lenix Swango.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Miss Mollie Coldiron left Monday for West Liberty, where she will teach in the school there this year.

Our better seven-eighths returns thanks to Mrs. Belle Godsey for a handsome bouquet of rare and fragrant flowers.

Any of our farmer friends having a few good hams to sell can find a ready buyer by calling at THE HERALD office.

Spencer Cooper, y^e editor, left Sunday for Jackson, where he had been summoned as a juror in the federal court now in session.

Mrs. Jim Cecil, of Mt. Sterling, and Mrs. John Smith Nickell, of Ezel, are with their brother, Chas. Cecil, who has been sick for some time.

Miss Flo Blankenship, a daughter of Barney Blankenship, of near Mt. Sterling, is very ill at the home of her grandfather, S. M. Tyler, at Consolation.

For Sale—Two of the Pieratt cottages for less than the lumber and lot can be bought. One acre in each lot; five rooms in each house. Apply at this office.

The editor and his better seven-eighths are indebted to Jimmie Brown for one of the most luscious watermelons it has been their pleasure to partake of this season.

At the fifteenth annual session of the State Council of Junior Order American Mechanics, held last week in Winchester, Rev. Harlan Murphy, of Pekin, was chosen chaplain.

George Dyer, who has been at West Liberty for a week or so, returned home Monday. He reports a big annual meeting at that place, and says at least 3,000 people attended it Sunday.

If you want a fine razor—as good as you can buy for $2—call this at office and get one for $1. We also have a few watches, good time keepers, that can be had for $1 each. Don't wait until supply is gone.

Next week we expect to begin the publication of Dr. Cook's exploit to the North pole in serial form. This will likely run for about six or eight weeks and will no doubt be interesting reading to many of our readers.

Hazel Green Academy opened with an enrollment of 80, the largest number in the history of the school for the first week of the session. At the opening of the second week the enrollment numbered 88. We are looking forward to a happy and profitable year's work. Rev. J. Wesley Hatcher, the newly chosen principal, was present at the opening of school. It will be impossible for him to take active charge of the school for some weeks. Prof. M. O. Carter will serve as acting principal until Mr. Hatcher is able to assume personal charge.

Dr. C. Hood Williams reports Charlie Cecil and Forest Cecil as being convalescent. He also informs us that Tommie, the 6-year-old son of Granville McIntosh, who has been very low with typhoid fever, to be much improved, and Okla McIntosh, another son, who has been suffering with the same disease in connection with inflammatory rheumatism, is also getting well.

Sandfield correspondence was delayed on the road somewhere and came in too late, but we give the most important item it contained. Andrew, the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Granville Mayabb, died Sunday morning of membranous croup. Funeral services were held at the residence of W. A. Oldfield, conducted by Rev. I. L. Honaker, after which the remains were laid to rest in the McNabb graveyard.

The fee for the registration of mail matter will be increased from 8 cents to 10 cents beginning November 1, next, according to an order from Postmaster General Hitchcock. The maximum indemnity allowed for the loss of a registered article has also been increased from $25 to $50 by the order.

Rollin Campbell, a son of Willie Campbell, deceased, of the Trent neighborhood, died Tuesday morning of consumption. The boy was living with his aunt on Stillwater, and was a brother of Oren Campbell, of this town. He was buried in the cemetery here Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Robert Cecil will leave Friday for Cincinnati, where she goes to buy the fall stock of millinery and a full line of notions, etc. for her sister, Miss Falay Long. She will spend two weeks in the city picking out the latest styles. Look out next week for opening announcement.

The funeral of Mrs. Jeff Couch will be preached at Old Grassy church on the first Sunday in October by Revs. Frank Wilson, Harlan Murphy and Billy Yorum. There will be dinner on the ground, and it is confidently expected that a large concourse of her friends will be present.

J. B. McLin has just had erected a commodious smokehouse and storeroom combined in connection with the new cottage occupied by Wm. Foreman. The carpenter work was done by George Rice and Sam Wilson applied the paint.

Several men who had been working on the Cumberland pipe line east of here passed through Hazel Green Sunday saying that end of the line was about completed, and were on their way to Campton to begin their work westward.

The best an individual can do is to please his fellowmen, and in order to reach this aim he must control himself and be ever mindful of his moral conduct.

The North Pole Trouble.

A dispatch from Battle Harbor, Labrador, dated September 10, says:

"Commander Peary will say nothing about Dr. Cook's claim to the discovery of the North Pole April 21, 1908, unless Dr. Cook makes a full statement of his journey over his signature to some geographical society or other competent body. It is intimated by some of the companions that in the latter event Commander Peary will undertake a complete refutation."

This won't do, Mr. Peary. You have publicly proclaimed Cook a fraud. You have announced that he has never been near the pole; that, indeed, he has not been out of sight of land. You have, in short, branded him as the most conscienceless and spectacular faker of the age. As an honest man yourself you cannot now dismiss this matter and refuse to say anything more about it.

You must prove your charges or place yourself in a position as unenviable as that in which you would place Dr. Cook. You cannot expect to blast the reputation of a rival by your unsupported and certainly not disinterested word, for while you have been more prominent in Arctic exploration than Cook your personal reputation is no better than his.

Moreover, if you would have the world believe that your charge is true you must prove that it is true, for Cook's conduct and spirit in this affair have been in every way so much manlier and fairer than yours that the world is today properly prejudiced in his favor.—Courier-Journal.

John Ward with his family is occupying a portion of the new cottage he is building on the site of the one burned down last winter. It is not quite finished, but when it is completed and receives the glowing covering of paint to be put on by that accomplished artist, Poet Sam Wilson, it will be a thing of beauty and we hope for John a joy forever.

In Loving Remembrance of Henry L. Godsey, who died in Washington, D. C., September 22, 1908, and D. S. Godsey, who died in Clermont county, Ohio, August 12, 1907:

One year, and two, have passed, since the ones we loved were called from us away,

And 'tis with aching heart that we recall those sad and lonely days.

Oh, God! how mysterious and strange are Thy ways.

To take from us these loved ones in the best of their days.

And hadst Thou asked us, Thou dost know

We would have said: "Oh, spare the blow."

Yes, with streaming tears should pray, "Lord, we love them, let them stay."

In love and truth they lived and died, Their lives were asked, but God denied.

KENTUCKY KERNELS

Carefully Collated and Concisely Chronicled.

At Livingston the two-months-old son of John Baker was accidentally rolled off a porch in a baby buggy and instantly killed.

Leander Spicer, colored, of Jackson, was held under $5,000 bond on the charge of killing Tom Higgins, also colored, at a blind tiger.

In Rockcastle county a man claims to have caught a catfish which weighed eighteen pounds and inside of which was a bottle of catsup.

Mrs. Perry Rice, of Paris, mistook a can of gasoline for coal oil in kindling a fire and an explosion ensued causing burns from which she died the following day.

Should the people of Lawrence county elect the Democratic nominee for county judge one thing is certain, they are sure to get Justice. W. M. Justice is the candidate.

The Warren county grand jury recognized the unwritten law when it refused to indict Charles Campbell, who killed his brother-in-law when he found him at Campbell's home.

After having lived his three-score years and ten, J. J. Miles, a prominent citizen of Miles X roads, in Warren county, was married last week to Miss Bessie Comer, a young school girl of 12 years.

Col. W. E. Hobson, who had the distinction of being the youngest colonel in the federal army during the civil war, was found dead last week in his room at the Mansard Hotel, in Bowling Green.

The ten-year-old son of Tom Gentry, of Ford, had been suffering for years with a tape worm. Last week the little fellow had one twenty-six feet long pass from him and is wondering where it all came from.

Riley Forsythe, aged 68 years, an ex-confederate soldier, who has been despondent and in ill health for some time, last week committed suicide at the home of his sister, Mrs. Frank McKinney, in Fleming county.

As the result of a duel with knives, brought on by an argument over politics, E. R. Butram, aged 72, lies at the point of death from stab wounds, while Wm. Boston, aged 67, his assailant, is in Louisville jail. Butram will probably die.

Between 50 and 60 head of sheep are said to have been killed recently by dogs in Nicholas county. One farmer is said to have lost 20 from one flock, and another about a dozen. About 75 dogs have been poisoned in and around Carlisle.

While officiating as judge in the harness classes at the Bourbon fair, Joel Fessler, aged 63 years, a prominent horseman of Montgomery county, was suddenly stricken with apoplexy and died before he could be removed from the ring.

Two unidentified men went to the home of Rufus Maynard, a well known farmer residing in Casey county near the Boyle county line, and calling him to the door beat him into unconsciousness, tore his ears from his head and almost removed his nose.

While returning from work in a field recently Joe and Walter Throckmorton, of Fleming county, wended their way through the pasture and drove home their two cows. They stopped at a spring to let them drink, and when they turned both animals fell dead.

The Harrodsburg Herald says: Add Stopher has presented us with two of the largest ears of corn we have ever seen. They are nine inches around and twelve and one half inches long and weigh four pounds. Each has 2,380 grains. He has thirty-five acres just like it.

Near Beattyville, about daylight last Thursday, Charles Scribner was shot and instantly killed by his nephew, James King. Both are colored. Capt. Mulliken's blood hounds were put on the trail, but King has so far escaped. King has served two terms in the penitentiary and stands indicted for mule stealing, burglary and breaking jail. Scribner's wife is the widow of "Tallow Dick" Combs, conspicuous in the Goebel assassination.

Robt. Holt, a prominent Carlisle county farmer, is the owner of an animal that is attracting wide attention. The animal is half horse and half mule, and the division is as plainly visible as anything can be. The head, ears, front feet, mane, neck and half of its body is a complete reproduction of a mule, and if that part of its body was exhibited with the other half concealed there is no one that would have the least doubt about it being a mule. The hind legs, tail, hips and the rear half of its body is the shape of a perfect horse, and is as easily distinguished as the front part of the animal. The mule part of the animal is a dark bay, while the horse portion is a beautiful roan, the dividing line being easily told, even at a distance of several hundred feet.

The road to ruin is always kept in good repair.

Nervous Collapse

"I have traveled for thirty years continually. I lost a great deal of sleep, which together with constant worry left me in such a nervous state that finally, after having two collapses of nervous prostration, I was obliged to give up traveling altogether. I doctored continually but with no relief. Dr. Miles' Nervine came to my rescue—I cannot describe the suffering which this Nervine saved me. Whenever I am particularly nervous a few doses relieve me."

A. G. C. LIBBY, Wells, Me.

There are many nervous wrecks. There is nervous prostration of the stomach, of the bowels, and other organs. The brain, the kidneys, the liver, the nerve centers are all exhausted. There is but one thing to do—build up the nervous system by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. Its strengthening influence upon the nervous system restores normal action to the organs, and when they all work in harmony, health is assured. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

THE TOLEDO BLADE,
TOLEDO, OHIO.
The Best Known Newspaper in the United States.
CIRCULATION, - - - 200,000
Popular in Every State.

The seventy-fourth year of its existence finds the Toledo Blade more popular than at any period of its remarkable career. It is now read each week by more than a million people. Its field is not circumscribed by State boundaries, but involves the length and breadth of the United States, giving it an unquestionable right of claiming to be the greatest national weekly newspaper in the country.

The Weekly Blade is distinctly a family newspaper. The one object of its publishers has always been to make it fit for the American home, for the fireside, and of interest to every member of the family. To fulfill this purpose it is kept clean and wholesome. The news of the world is handled in a comprehensive manner, and the various departments of The Blade are edited with painstaking care. The Household page is a delight to the women and children; current affairs are treated editorially without prejudice; the serial stories are selected with the idea of pleasing the greatest number of fiction lovers; the Question Bureau is a scrapbook of information; the Farmstead columns are conducted with the purpose of giving the patrons a medium for the exchange of ideas and information on farm topics. No department is neglected, but every feature is taken care of with the idea of making The Blade worth many times the price of subscription—one dollar a year. Sample copies mailed free. Address, THE BLADE, Toledo, Ohio.

MARRIAGE IN MOROCCO.

Negotiations by the Parents—Fortune Telling Made Easy.

Negotiations for the marriage of, say, Ali Mahmoud are now in progress. The parents are arranging the whole affair. Probably Ali will not see his future bride until after the ceremony. The wild, passionate stories of the east do not occur in Morocco. A Moor says that "a woman is like unto your shadow—run away from it and it will always follow you; run after it and you never catch it."

Ali Mahmoud's indifference to the personal appearance of his intended spouse is not shared by the young lady. Zaida is just fourteen years of age and, following the usual custom, has recourse to magic to gain an idea of the appearance of her future lord and master. The marabout, whose services at this juncture are indispensable, is now requisitioned. This saintly person finds it an easy matter to practice on the ignorant and superstitious females.

Without any difficulty he ascertains the identity of the bridegroom and carefully studies his personal appearance. He then repairs to the residence of the bride on the day appointed. A Thursday is set apart for these seances. The prospective bride smears the left side of her face with khol and rouge and prepares a huge plate of couscous with her left hand. Then she pays successive visits throughout the city to seven baths, seven mills, seven bakeries and to the banks of seven streams to invite the genii to supper.

At midnight the females of the house assemble at the gate of the house and in total darkness go through the prescribed formula of welcome to the ghostly visitants. The couscous is already set out for the delectation of the supernatural guest. When a reasonable time has elapsed for the supposed genii to finish their meal all present ascend to the housetop.

Fires are lighted, and the marabout, with great solemnity, throws small pellets of various drugs upon them on behalf of the girl for whom the oracle is to be interrogated. By the various forms assumed by the flames and smoke the marabout then professes to describe the future husband of the girl. The ceremony concluded, he takes his departure with a substantial reward and a further enhancement of his reputation as a magician and holy man.

A few days later Zaida receives a present from her future father-in-law, and the contract of marriage is definitely arranged.

A deputation of the bridegroom's relations now come to fetch her, and the procession is formed to lead her to her new house.

Ali Mahmoud and Zaida eyed each other curiously, for it is the first time they have met. The long and tedious ceremonies and the six days of feasting over, they take up their quarters in his father's house until such time as he can afford to set up an establishment of his own. Zaida is relegated to the monotonous indoor life of the Mohammedan women. She is never allowed to leave the house. Like most of her class, she has very little culture. She can neither read nor write, while she is denied the solace of prayer from sheer ignorance of the prescribed. Her prime is passed in trivial household duties until such time as her husband can afford to buy a negress slave. Her amusements consist of futile embroidery and long hours at eventide spent on the terraces reserved for the women.—London Graphic.

It Broke Him.
A clever young woman, as resourceful as she was pretty, married a young man of rather gay habits. Yet from the start all went well. The husband soon became the village model of domesticity.

"Jim," said a girl friend to the bride, "no longer spends his evenings at the club, does he?"

"Oh, no," said the other, laughing. "I soon broke Jim of that."

"How did you do it?" asked the girl.

"Every night he went out," the matron explained, "I'd put two armchairs side by side before the parlor radiator, and then I'd hold a match to a cigar till the room got a faint odor of smoke."

Her Call.

The whole southland never claimed a sweeter, more lovable and gentle woman, but she could never be persuaded to use a phone. Lately the entire household was down with colds, and there was no one else able to call a physician in the night.

After ringing up "Central" this dear little woman became panic stricken and could not think of the word the household used when they wanted "Exchange." Hurriedly she put the receiver up and whispered into the astonished ear of the telephone girl the word:

"Hurrah!"—Lippincott's.

HUNTING A LION.

When the Brute Fights Either He or the Hunter Dies.

Nothing causes the East African colonist more genuine concern than that his guest should not have been provided with a lion. The Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill says that a failure to produce a lion preys on the colonist's mind until it becomes a regular obsession. He feels that some deep reproach is laid upon his own hospitality and the reputation of his adopted country. In "My African Journey" Mr. Churchill tells something of the pursuit of this noble game:

"This is the way in which they hunt lions: First find the lion, lured to a kill, driven from a reed bed or kicked up incontinently by the way. Once viewed, he must never be lost sight of for a moment. Mounted on ponies of more or less approved fidelity, three or four daring Britons or Somalis gallop after him across rocks, holes, tussocks, through high grass, thorn scrub, undergrowth, turning him, shepherding him, heading him this way and that until he is brought to bay.

"For his part the lion is no seeker of quarrels. He is often described in accents of contempt. His object throughout is to save his skin. If, being unarmed, you meet six or seven unexpectedly, all you need do, according to my information, is to speak to them sternly, and they will slink away, while you throw a few stones at them to hurry them up. All the highest authorities recommend this.

"But when pursued from place to place, chased hither and thither by wheeling horsemen, the lion becomes embittered. First he begins to growl and roar at his enemies in order to terrify them and make them leave him in peace. Then he darts little short charges at them. Finally, when every attempt at peaceful persuasion has failed, he pulls up abruptly and offers battle. Once he has done this, he will run no more. He means to fight and to fight to the death.

"And when a lion, maddened with the agony of a bullet wound, distressed by long and hard pursuit, or, most of all, a lioness in defense of her cubs, is definitely committed to battle death is the only possible conclusion. Broken limbs, broken jaws, a body raked from end to end, lungs pierced through and through—none of these counts. It must be death, instant and utter, for the lion or down goes the man, mauled by septic claws and fetid teeth, crushed and crunched and poisoned afterward to make doubly sure."

Reward of the Faithful Servant.

The merchant prince had sent for the faithful clerk, who confronted his master tremblingly.

"Jenkins," said the merchant prince, "you have been in my employ for twenty-five years."

"Yes, sir," faltered the faithful clerk.

"Twenty-five years today, is it not?"

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir, for remembering it."

"Tut! Tut! You have been an honor to the house."

"Thank you again, sir."

"You have proved yourself worthy of my confidence."

"Oh, sir."

"You have grown gray in my service."

"Yes, sir."

"Jenkins, as a slight token of my recognition of this fact I have a present for you. Pray accept this bottle of hair dye!"—Woman's Home Companion.

Jules Verne's Methods.

Jules Verne, author of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," required no legislative enactment to make him get up early. He rose at 4 in the morning in the summer and climbed up a sort of watchtower which dominated his house in the Boulevard de Longueville, Amiens, where his study was situated. He called this room his "cabin." There he used to work until 10 o'clock. In the winter when he awoke he would await daylight either reading in bed or evolving scenes for his novels. After lunch it was his practice to walk along the boulevards, which form a beautiful green cincture around the old Picardy town. Then he would make for his club and read the newspapers and study the scientific reviews, from which he derived great aid in the composition of his books.

"I Told You So."

An old couple lived in the mountains of eastern Tennessee. He was ninety-five and she ninety. Their son, a man of seventy, died. As the old folks crossed the pasture to their cabin after the burial the woman noticed a tear roll down her husband's cheek. She patted him tenderly on the arm and said:

"Never mind, John; never mind. You know I always said we never would raise that boy."—Success Magazine.

HE MADE HIS KICK.

The Man Who Had Long Ago Bought an Eight Day Clock.

"You don't remember, I reckon," said the sour faced man, putting his arms on the showcase, "that I bought a clock of you twenty-five years ago?"

"I certainly do not," answered the elderly jeweler, "but I'll take your word for it if you say you did."

"Well, I did. It was twenty-five years ago last Monday."

"Remember what you paid for it?"

"Yes. I paid you $10."

"Ever had to get it repaired?"

"No."

"It's a pretty good clock, then, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes. The clock's all right, but I've found out something about it that you didn't tell me."

"So?"

"Yes. When I bought it I asked you how often I'd have to wind it. You said once a week."

"Well?"

"Well, I've just found out that it'll go eight days without winding."

"Certainly! Most clocks are eight day clocks. That's to allow for your forgetting to wind it sometimes."

"I never forgot to wind it, sir. Regularly every Monday morning for twenty-five years I've wound that clock. That makes fifty-two times a year. If I had known it would go eight days I would have wound it on the eighth day, and I would have had to wind it only forty-six times a year. It takes me about two minutes to wind it up. I've wasted twelve minutes every year on the thing. See! In twenty-five years I've put in 300 minutes, or five hours, the half of a man's working day, standing on a chair and winding up that blamed old clock when it didn't need winding!"

"Well," said the stupefied jeweler, "what do you want to do about it?"

"Nothing, sir. I only wanted you to know it, that's all. When you sell an eight day clock to a man you ought to tell him it's an eight day clock. Good day, sir!"

Straightening himself up and pulling his hat brim down in front, he turned on his heel and stalked out of the store with the air of a man with a grouse who had freed his mind.—Chicago Tribune.

How to Learn.

"The best way to study nature is to go right up to it."

"I suppose so."

"Oh, I know it. I was once disposed to doubt the industry of the ant, of which so much is said."

"And you learned better?"

"I did. I had a controversy with a naturalist over the question, and I thought I had him beaten until he gave me a demonstration."

"Took you out and showed you the ants at work, did he?"

"Well, not exactly that, but he took me along on one of his scientific expeditions and then maliciously pitched my tent over an ant hill. By the time I discovered what was happening the conviction was forced upon me that ants are really and truly industrious. They are small, but they made me move, and some of them went right along with us to the next camping place."

What's Your Pet Phrase?

Of course you have a pet phrase or expression. You are one of the few exceptions if you haven't. Very likely the very words with which this article begins—"of course"—are used by you at every turn, but you don't know it. You have a particular ejaculation which does duty in all circumstances. It may be a variation of "Great Scott!" such as "Great Scotland Yard!" or it may be "Good Grace church street!" which is a variation of "Good gracious!" You probably end most of your sentences with "you know" or "you see." Then you have a pet word which you bring in wherever you can. Perhaps it is "logical," and the number of times that word and its opposite—"illogical"—appear in your conversation is simply alarming. But you don't see it, you know.—London Answers.

Insects Have Thousands of Eyes

The eyes of insects present several peculiarities. Often in the same individual we shall find two sets of eyes, the simple and the compound, these latter having a large number of minute hexagonal facets, each of which is in reality a cornea, and the marvel is that every single facet belongs to a distinct eye, with pupil, iris, lens, all complete. The number of these corneas varies very considerably. While the ant possesses fifty only, the ordinary housefly has 4,000, butterflies have no fewer than 17,000, and some beetles rejoice in as many as 25,000.—London Chronicle.
